To Our Valued Customers,

Coronavirus Update

I am pleased to announce that Bonal has reopened all departments after an eight-week partial shutdown. We know many companies across the metalworking industry rely on Bonal's Meta-lax stress relief and weld conditioning process as an integral part of their businesses. As the U.S. and world economies begin to recover, we hope that the distinct benefits provided by Meta-Lax's unique combination of quality improvement, time reduction, and cost savings, will provide your company with a dramatic advantage. Together, with our customers like you, we hope to move the metalworking industry towards greater heights than before the pandemic.

Even as we reopen, be assured that Bonal is taking the utmost caution for cleanliness, social distancing, and personal protection according to the CDC guidelines for the health and safety of our employees and our customers.

If there is any way that the Meta-Lax process can assist your company's recovery and growth, please feel free to call us.

I pray that you, your employees, and your families remain safe and healthy.

Sincerely,
Tom Hebel
President
